where to go and what to do

Our history dates back to 1736, when Thomas Penn and Benjamin Eastburn selected our city site at the meeting of the Delaware and Lehigh rivers. The Native Americans called the area "Lechawitauk" or "Place at the Forks," and the area around our hotel in Easton soon became a popular meeting place. In fact, it was here that the Declaration of Independence was read on July 8, 1776 (we were one of only three readings). You can still see much of our early history at places such as Bachmann Tavern, built in 1753, or the Easton Public Library, organized in 1811. Visit Lafayette College, named for the Marquis de Lafayette, and see a campus with roots back to 1824.
